Klein Rules Glasco Properties Overassessed

Homeowners Win Tax Suit

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA
Freeman staff

SAUGERTIES — A non-jury trial before Supreme Court Judge Aaron Klein has been settled in favor of 27 Glasco area property owners, upholding their contention that their land parcels are currently overassessed and paving the way for about $10,000 in rebates.

The property owners had brought a tax certiorari lawsuit against Town of Saugerties assessor Paul Pavlovich and the Board of Assessors. The court decision found that the land parcels in question are "significantly" over-assessed.

Three separate, overlapping suits were involved in the county court decision, which had its basis in a 1975 Court of Appeals ruling involving the Long Island town of Islip. The so-called Hellerstein decision there required that the town adopt an assessment role based on full property values. That ruling allowed several property owners in a tax district to join forces and prosecute jointly by a class action to reduce their assessments.

Attorneys Richard F. Riseley and Paul Gruner, who represented the majority of the Glasco homeowners involved, said tax certiorari cases involve "a complicated and specialized area of the law."

Gruner noted, "When you sue a town or taxing district, you are not suing for a dollar amount, but to have your assessment reduced. You're saying you're overassessed on an inequality basis, and you're attacking the town's ratio of assessed value to the real or full value of your property."

State law, Gruner pointed out, now requires all property to be assessed at 100 per cent full value, but Saugerties has not yet fully complied with the law. Glasco taxpayers were therefore able to claim "a blatant case of inequitable assessment," since town assessments are unequal, and their properties were overassessed in comparison with other properties in the town.

Pavlovich and his board arrive at assessments by taking all town properties and applying what they say is their ratio to all properties in the town. They have set that ratio at 14 per cent, and—by taking the full value and then taking 14 per cent of that—they arrive at what should be the final assessment.

The board contended, therefore, that every property in the town was similarly assessed. But Glasco petitioned (See TAXES, page 5)

Ellenville Gets Emergency Water Bypass

Frozen Pipes Cause 300 Layoffs

ELLENVILLE — Frozen pipes leading from a mountain water source into the village's water main has caused the temporary layoff of about 300 persons and necessitated construction of an emergency bypass pipeline to channel water into the area.

Ellenville Mayor Jerome Elkin said this morning that sub-zero weather around Lake Maratanza in the Shawangunk Mountains has iced up the water flow before it even reaches the village's water main.

The problem has been growing for about two weeks, said Elkin, and it came to a head Friday when Civil Defense officials were called in to supply emergency assistance.

"We'll be bringing in 4,000 feet of eight inch pipe and we're going to hook it up to the main and pump water directly from the lake into the system," explained Elkin.

County Civil Defense Director John Adsit said that trucks from the Ulster's highway yards set out early this morning to pick up village employees to help load the pipe and a 1500-gallon-per-minute pump from the CD stockpile in Middletown.

In a voluntary response to a request by the mayor to ease up on industrial use of water, Channelmaster, the area's largest employer, has temporarily laid off about 300 persons until the problem is remedied.

A spokesman for the company said this morning that the employees were told of the lay-off today and that the work stoppage would be in effect until the new pipeline is completed.

Channelmaster uses water for some of its machinery and for plant plumbing.

Mayor Elkin stated that no village residents have suffered a water loss because of the frozen source pipes. "The only people who are without water are those with frozen service lines, their own lines, and we're thawing them out as fast as we can. That's the same problem that has been happening all over the county."

Elkin estimated that in all it would take about four to six truckloads to complete the job of transporting the pipeline up the side of the mountain today. "If we can find the main pipe we should be able to get started this afternoon and the job should take two or three days to complete."

The village of Rosendale has experienced some severe service line freeze ups, with many residents there left without water for several days.

Persons in the Saugerties and Phoenicia areas have also gone without water for varying lengths of time because of the extremely cold weather and lack of snow cover which keeps the ground from deep freezing.

Detectives Probe Fabric Fire Cause

KINGSTON — Kingston detectives and city fire department officials are investigating the cause of the Saturday night fire which totally destroyed the one-story Wearhouse Fabric and Sewing Center at 482 Albany Avenue, damaging adjoining business and injuring six firemen.

No estimate of damage was given by officials, and the building's owner, Aaron Bahl, declined to talk to newsmen.

Snow Equipment Still On Alert

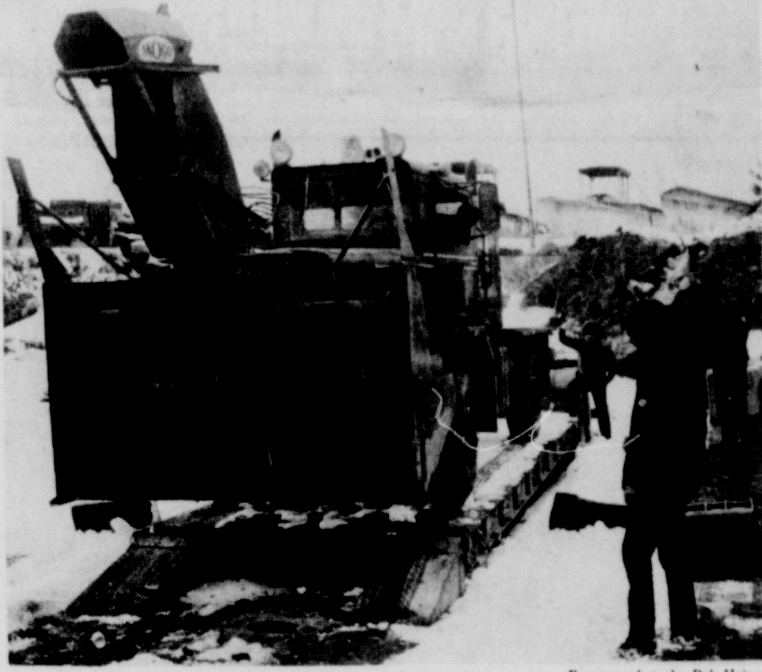

KINGSTON — Four pieces of snow clearing equipment and their operators are still on stand-by at the Ulster County Highway Department, waiting for go-ahead to aid in clean up operations in the western part of the state.

The Army Corps of Engineers had requested that any spare equipment and manpower be sent to Buffalo and the surrounding area to help in the massive snow removal operations there last week.

However, just as Ulster's aid was about to get rolling, the president declared the afflicted counties federal disaster areas.

"What happened was that the Corps, which had control of the operations until that time, lost that authority," explained Civil Defense Director John Adsit. "It's now up to the individual townships to secure their own help and then the people will be paid through the federal government."

World in Brief

Search Is Launched For Cave Explorers

GEISLINGEN, West Germany (UPI) — Rescue teams have started a massive search for four cave explorers trapped in the "Mordloch" (Murder Hole) cavern near this south German town, which was flooded by melting snow and rain late Saturday, police said Sunday.

A spokesman said nine police skin-divers have found no trace of the trapped men, ranging in age from 16 to 28 — who had entered the cave Saturday morning — in the swirling waters.

Experts said they feared the trapped men stood little chance of surviving.

Gas Shortages May Get Even Worse

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government analysts believe natural gas shortages next winter might be even more severe than those causing the current crisis.

They said this winter's gas supply may fall 18 per cent below demand if the extremely cold weather continues.

But they said the shortages could be even greater next year — even if the weather is normal. The supply situation will depend on unresolved political decisions involving allocation plans, price deregulation and conservation measures as well as on the weather.

Ski Vacation Bus Overturns in Alps

BOLZANO, Italy (UPI) — A bus carrying health insurance workers home from a skiing vacation in the Alps overturned on an ice-covered road Sunday, injuring 17, seven of them seriously enough to require hospitalization, police said.

Police said the accident occurred when one of three buses carrying the workers skidded out of control on a steeply descending and sharply curved section of roadway covered with ice.

Belgian Picketers Hit Russian Embassy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — A half-dozen demonstrators, including a Belgian parliament member, chained themselves to the fence surrounding the Soviet Embassy Sunday, protesting the continued detention in the Soviet Union of a Belgian human rights advocate.

The demonstrators, members of the Flemish Action Committee for Eastern Europe, were demanding the release of Anton Pype, who was arrested in Leningrad last Dec. 23. They also called for adherence to the Helsinki agreement and support for Soviet dissidents.

Vogt Platform Is 'Get Tough'

By CHAZY DOWALIBY
Freeman staff

KINGSTON — District Attorney Francis J. Vogt formally announced his candidacy for county judge this morning on a "get tough" platform of "letting the neighbors know" the names of young people convicted of felonies and prodding lawyers into no-delay action in conducting trials.

Vogt, who has been D.A. for seven years, will seek both the Republican and Democratic party nominations for the bench seat being vacated by Judge Raymond Mino, who will not seek re-election this November.

For the past several years Vogt's office has been conducting a precedent setting policy of no plea bargaining on grand jury indictments. He says he has actually increased the number of cases tried rather than causing a backlog because of the extra workload.

"Together with our other accomplishments, this gives me a great deal of pride in this office and I will not leave it without a certain amount of regret."

But despite any sentimental attachment to his current job, Vogt has plunged headlong into what he thinks will be a winning issue in this year's judicial battle — tough law and order.

He says, if elected, he would hear felony charges against persons 16 to 19 years old in open court, rather than private session, in the hopes that "the resulting publicity would embarrass the offender or at least place his neighbors on notice as to his propensity for criminal conduct."

MARKETBASKET- Food Prices Jumped 4.6 Per Cent in January

KINGSTON — The cost of feeding a family of four in the city reached its highest price in eight months last week, with the 41-item market basket ringing in at $68.12.

Information released today by the county's Consumer Information Service indicated that the market basket index rose 1.9 per cent for the week ending Feb. 5. The same foods were priced at $66.85 the previous week.

A record high increase was also recorded for the entire month of January when food prices jumped 4.6 per cent — from $65.24 to its present figure of $68.12. It is the largest one-month increase since the Consumer Office began its weekly survey last June.

The market basket contains a sampling of foods which would be adequate to feed a family of four for one week.

Each of the six basket categories, with the exception of dairy products, increased in price last week.

The biggest rise, however, was recorded in the fresh fruits and vegetables category in a 21 per cent increase in the cost of a 12 ounce can of frozen orange juice.

The value of the week was found in the meats and fish category, where the price of bottom round roast fell from $1.62 to $1.38 per pound.

Coffee prices climbed for the sixth consecutive week and now register $2.52 a pound.

The survey is conducted in three area chain supermarkets.

Frances Leggett Dead At 81, Was Author, College Benefactor

STONE RIDGE — Mrs. Frances Howard Leggett, author, Ulster County Community College benefactor, and the former wife of Vincent David Margesson, Ridgely Manor, Stone Ridge, died at Kingston Hospital Saturday after suffering a stroke.

Born in New York, Nov. 30, 1896, Mrs. Leggett was the daughter of the late Besse MacLeod Leggett, and Francis H. Leggett, founder of the wholesale grocery business which bore his name, as does Leggett road in Stone Ridge where she lived for many years.

In 1916, Mrs. Leggett was married to Captain David Margesson, later made Viscount Margesson following his service as chief British government whip from 1931 to 1940, and as War Minister in Winston Churchill's cabinet from 1940 to 1942. The marriage was dissolved in 1940 and she resumed her maiden name, returning to her home in Stone Ridge.

Mrs. Leggett opened one of her homes to the British sailors on leave from the Royal Navy during World War II. In 1962 she donated 30 acres of her property to Ulster County Community College, which was then being formed.

In 1968 Mrs. Leggett wrote the memoirs of her parents' marriage, Late and Soon, which was published in England and America and received critical acclaim on both sides of the Atlantic.

She was an honorary member (See LEGGETT, page 5)

Here And There

Snowmobilers Were Snowed Out

BURTON TOWNSHIP, Ohio (UPI) — A March of Dimes snowmobile marathon scheduled for Saturday at Pleasant Hills Country Club was postponed until March 5 because of too much snow.

Lack of Service Was Expensive

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (UPI) — A judge has awarded a Barbados couple $2,500 in damages because waiters refused to serve them at the local Hilton hotel.

Barbados Chief Justice Sir William Douglas ordered the hotel to pay the fine to Vernon Smith, a local lawyer, and his wife, Jane Yeo, a local physician.

Smith and his wife said they had to sit at a table in the hotel for 20 minutes and then the headwaiter told them the table was already taken and they could not be served.

Not All Rosy, Though

BIG SPRING, Tex. (UPI) — The birds are drunk in West Texas this year.

Wildlife biologists say the cold winter is producing a natural winery in the area because wild berries ripen, freeze, then thaw and ferment.

"The birds will eat them and become a little bit intoxicated," said W.E. Richter, a wildlife biologist with the Soil Conservation Service.

An abundant crop of juniper and mountain cedar berries are attracting more of the migratory robins and cedar waxwings than normal, said Bebe McCasland.

"I found one sitting in the middle of the street. I stopped the car, reached down and picked him up," she said. "I put him on my front porch, but he flew to the top of my neighbor's house where he stayed until he sobered up."

But it's not all rosy for the birds. Overindulgence often leads to death, said Mrs. Wood Erskine, a licensed "bird rehabilitator" in Midland, Tex.

She said they can survive "if they aren't overly intoxicated, aren't eaten by cats or dogs and someone takes them in and keeps them warm."

Tiger Gets Movie, not Karate

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — A royal bengal tiger that was to have been pitted in a televised fight to the death against a bare-handed karate expert may be headed for stardom after all.

The beast was flown to Port Au Prince for the match against Maroru Yamamoto and promoter Yoshio Kou of Japan had expected the television rights would bring him $5 million and $400,000 for Yamamoto, if he survived.

But international wildlife organizations raised an uproar and the match, which was to have been held Saturday, was banned by Haitian President-for-life Jean-Claude Duvalier.

After the fight was called off, Kou left in search of other nations willing to host the fight and the beast's health deteriorated while it languished in a crate too small to stand up in.

But the publicity given to the tiger's plight caught the eye of Los Angeles movie producer Sandy Howard, who was shooting a science fiction film in St. Croix, Virgin Islands, in which humans are turned into animals.

Howard decided to charter a plane to Haiti to pick up the tiger Monday and made a few changes in the script to accommodate his new star.

Otherwise, the film will star Burt Lancaster and Michael York.

But Driving Ban Hurting Buffalo Businesses

Snow-Smashed Areas Are Returning to Normal

By UPI

Snow-weary western and northern New York residents returned to somewhat normal lifestyles today but a ban on driving in Buffalo threatened the business climate in the state's second-largest city.

Numerous businesses, industries and schools in western New York planned to re-open today after being closed last week because of a series of snowstorms which left the area crippled. All Buffalo schools, however, planned to remain closed until at least Wednesday.

Likewise, the Watertown area was digging itself out, after a guarantee of federal aid, sunny skies and permission to drive on area roads boosted spirits. State and federal officials visited the area over the weekend to assess damage.

Across the upstate area, most of the 220,000 industrial workers and 500,000 school children who were idled last week by natural gas cutbacks were expected to return to their normal routines this week.

The importation of nearly 100 million cubic feet of gas daily into the state and an order by Gov. Hugh Carey shifting some of the burden for conservation measures from industrial users spurred the predictions.

Although most utilities planned to begin restoring service to industrial customers, National Fuel Gas in Buffalo said it firm would continue its curtailment to industrial customers "at least until midnight Tuesday."

Buffalo Mayor Stanley Makowski said Sunday a ban on non-essential driving in the city would remain in effect at least until 12:01 a.m. Tuesday.

Drivers who defy the travel ban are subject to arrest and fines.

Makowski said only another major storm would prevent the ban from being lifted Tuesday morning. He said private snowplows and tow trucks could work on city streets today.

The ban was imposed early last week to give snow removal crews access to clogged city streets. It was lifted Thursday but a massive traffic jam forced Makowski to reinstate it.

Buffalo officials said they were considering alternatives to the ban, including the imposition of a mandatory carpooling law or confining the restrictions to the downtown area.

Gas production resumed Sunday at the Ashland Oil refinery, which had been shut down for five days last week when a catalyst became contaminated. The shutdown had severely strained National Fuel Gas supplies.

A seven-county area in western New York, along with Jefferson and Lewis counties on the eastern end of Lake Ontario, were declared major federal disaster areas over the weekend by President Carter.

As snow-removal efforts continued, the Army Corps of Engineers estimated the total cost of its snow-clearing work in the seven county region at $12.3 million.

The corps said it had contracted more than 890 front-end loaders, dump trucks and plows and said it could take another nine days to complete the snow removal.

The National Weather Service has predicted more relief for the area with temperatures in the 20s Tuesday and the 30s Wednesday.

Cost-Cutting Move 'Unconstitutional'

ALBANY (UPI) — Despite weekend meetings, state officials today still faced a $45-million hole in Gov. Hugh Carey's welfare reduction plan for his 1977-78 budget.

The gap developed when Carey's legal advisors decided a proposal to limit "home relief" welfare payments for employables to 45 days would violate the state constitution.

A spokesman for the Department of Social Services said Sunday night an agreement among department officials, Carey's staff and Budget Division representatives could come later this week.

"They worked over the weekend," he said, but did not reach any final decisions.

In his budget presentation last month, Carey called for a $200-million cut in state welfare and Medicaid spending. Because the state and locality pay equal shares in many programs, he said localities would realize similar savings.

Carey called for the limit on home relief payments to "employable single persons and childless couples," reductions in maximum shelter allowances, an aid cutoff for illegal aliens and crackdowns on welfare cheats.

In the home relief singles and two-person categories, there are about 120,000 persons.

The spokesman for Social Services Commissioner Philip Toia said the categories were originally selected for a cut because "one of our major concerns was to avoid affecting those who have children."

"When it was established that we could not limit the duration of payments, the most logical alternative would be to limit amounts," the spokesman said.

Officials said other alternatives being considered were a reduction in "maximums" such as the top reimbursement for rent. However, this would only effect a few recipients paying the maximum, so it would be limited.

Another consideration was that "for every $1 we cut, a social services recipient gets back in food stamps a certain amount of the savings," Toia's spokesman said.

Kidnaped Students Refuse to Go Home

FRANCISTOWN, Botswana (UPI) — In a drab building on a street with no name, more than 100 black Rhodesian families were quietly torn apart by civil war Sunday.

On one side were 140 parents struggling to keep their children. On the other — known to be nearby, yet unseen — were black nationalist guerrillas promising the children a role in the struggle to turn white-ruled Rhodesia into black-run Zimbabwe.

And in the middle were about 380 students, male and female, rounded up at the Manama Lutheran Mission School in Rhodesia a week ago and brought to Botswana by a small band of guerrillas.

In the main, the guerrillas won.

The parents returned to Rhodesia Sunday night with only about 50 of the sons and daughters they sought to retrieve. The students ranged in age from 12 to 21, and for the older ones the call of war outweighed the family pleas.

Jonathan Nkala was among the first to be reunited with his children at the district commissioner's office.

Botswana authorities put him in a small room and brought his 13-year-old daughter, Zbandiwe, and, he said, "I just told her I was taking her and she accepted it."

Then his elder daughter, 16-year-old Fortune, was brought in. "I expected to do the same with the older one but surprisingly she just said: 'I'm not going.'"

"She said she wanted to go to Zambia and obtain an education ... she never expressed sympathy (for the guerrillas). It surprises me a great deal indeed."

She did not say why she wanted to go to Zambia nor what type of education she'd be getting. Some of the other children, without citing the guerrilla connection, told their parents their education would take four months.

Zambia is the training ground and main staging area for guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African Peoples' Union. Four months is the normal period of time for training guerrillas.

Levi Moya said of his 15-year-old daughter, Musa, "She's not even willing to talk to me. I don't think I'll ever see her again. She only said: 'If you got some money, give it to me.' I didn't give her any."

Some parents whose children wouldn't go back said the students were too frightened to return.

The parents set out from the Rhodesian city of Bulawayo at their own request Saturday in buses hired by the Rhodesian government, which has charged the students were kidnaped.

Botswana police prevented reporters from speaking to students who refused to return, but one forlorn father said of his 17-year-old daughter: "The child is very happy. I really don't know what made her happy. She shook my hands happily and left the room."

Market Basket's Birthplace

After a tireless search of some 13 days, leading through the history of several ancient federal agencies, down the Potomac River to Hyattsville, Maryland and back up to the port of the Hudson, Gotham itself, we have found the source of the Ulster County Market Basket.

The exploration began with a random remark during an interview with Consumer Information Service person Jon Burstein over just what went into the 41-item total of grocery spending his office releases every week.

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture disavowed any knowledge of the nutritional value of the list. The New York City Consumer Affairs office said it thought it was based on the U.S.D.A. list, but at the time, no one was there who could explain just how.

Well, Burstein found out.

In a lengthy explanation provided by Alan Cohen of the City Consumer Affairs office, it states that the products used to conduct the market basket survey are meant as representative "groups" only, not as real items to be bought.

The infamous five pounds of Oreo cookies, for instance, is meant to include crackers, cookies, cakes pies, doughnuts, sweet rolls and even soup that contains a high percentage of noodles or macaroni.

The market basket is based in part on U.S.D.A. Moderate Cost Family Food Plan for four people, but also was weighted by input on high volume sales from chain stores, a survey of exactly what people eat, nutritious or not, and the consumer price index which just tells everyone how much an average family is likely to spend for food.

Thank you, Mr. Burstein for clearing things up. And best wishes for many more informative supermarket shopping days ahead.

VFW Cartoon Is A Disgrace

Dear Editor:

Your cartoonist's conception of the VFW is not only a disgrace, but an unforgivable insult to every veteran that has served this country, and those that died fighting for the principles that have made these United States flourish.

Not to mention the men and women that have been missing in action, and the disabled that are still carrying the scars of battle until the end of their days.

The idiot that made up that cartoon has to be a moron or a person without any principles, and should be driven out of town and the industry for his insulting and immoral attitude toward the veteran population not only of Ulster County, but the nation.

Let it be known that if it weren't for the veterans of all wars, your paper and your so-called cartoonist, wouldn't be able to publish your editorials as a free enterprise under a different flag, think about that Mr. Editor.

So pay homage and respect to those who served and our fallen heroes that helped keep this great nation of ours free from tyranny and aggression, and above all our freedom of speech.

Incidentally Mr. Editor, I'm enclosing the front cover of our national magazine, which should be inserted to honor our veterans, instead of the one you had in your publication of Jan. 26, 1977.

Dear Editor:

Speaking as a senior citizen, I am in full agreement with our Town Board in the Town of Esopus to use the $80,000 surplus to build a new Highway Garage.

So let's get behind them and vote yes on the new Highway Garage on Feb. 15, noon to 9 p.m. at your regular polling place.

County Employees Shortchanged

Dear Editor:

On Jan. 27, the CSEA Ulster County Chapter, members only, voted to accept a three year contract with NO raise in pay the first year— not even cost of living, which is so desperately needed at this time.

Do not attack your negotiating team, with bitterness, and put the blame on them for the pitiful contract offer. They did their very best to help you. The CSEA Committee was up against a BLANK WALL OF NEGATIVENESS from the legislators' negotiation committee.

ALL CSEA employees should have been allowed to vote on such an important matter as their individual livelihood. It is too bad that more county employees are not concerned, leaving the burden to a certain few and then complaining. County employees join the union for your own individual benefit, as is the case right now, your source of living being jeopardized.

Legislation here in Ulster County does not consider CSEA employees as taxpayers with obligations to meet the same as the legislators have. This was evident at the taxpayers' protest meeting at George Washington School. More taxpayers than CSEA attended.

There will be NO raise for 1977 for Ulster County employees and the legislators' statement that it is necessary to wait until the end of the 1977 year to be given a $200 bonus according to revenue collected during the year. We, the Ulster County employees, could have taken this time to consider and not sign a new binding three year contract in haste.

Why was there no money allowed in the county budget for county employees pay raises, yet, the budget allows, from time to time, numerous pay raises in high positions and other fields in the county? Just ONE given a $2,000 raise alone, would take care of 10 county employees $200 bonus given at the end of the 1977 year.

What happened to the rest of the $160,000 for benefit of Ulster County employees for pay raise adjustment? Not one county employee has received any portion of this money, in accordance to the contract agreement. This pay raise adjustment could very well be used this year, Jan. 1, since Ulster County Employees will receive no raise at all for the year of 1977. County legislation could very well distribute this money appropriated to CSEA employees' wages. Why does the county legislation hold back and deprive CSEA employees from money due them through a bonafide agreement? This should be of interest and concern to CSEA taxpayers and other taxpayers.

A quote from a county employee at the CSEA meeting, stated in despair, "What will I do for my family. I have two children?" Out of the small $200 bonus, it would have meant $100 for each child, had the bonus been given as of Jan. 1 instead of the end of the year.

Can the 33 legislators sign the proposed Ulster County CSEA contract with a CLEAR conscience?

A Cancer Drug Being Ignored?

WASHINGTON (KFS) - The American Cancer Society and the cancer industry in general is again being accused of making serious scientific and medical judgments that have been tinged by egotism, pride, sour personal relations and a jealous fear that a non-ingroup member may have made a major contribution to the field.

Even as the Cancer Establishment, which has been so successful that somewhere like 400,000 Americans will perish from the disease this year, continues to encourage the criminal prosecution of the claimed anticancer agent, laetrile, a new fight has broken out over the use of hydrazine sulfate in cancer therapy. No one has yet been indicted but Joseph Gold, M.D., who first proposed the use of the compound, had best watch his step.

Gold, a duly licensed, orthodox medical man, has proposed an unorthodox approach to cancer therapy - an indirect method whereby the cancer cell's ability to feed themselves would be disrupted. David Rorvik, the brilliant medical writer who did all the research upon which this column is based, described the metabolic process that hydrazine sulfate is meant to interrupt as follows: "The cancer cells feed on the glucose or sugar of the body and leave lactic acid behind as an end product. It happens that the liver is programmed very rigidly to take this lactic acid and, through a very high-energy-consuming process, covert it back into glucose. Normally the body would have occasion, except in a few specialized situations, to do this only in periods of emergency, as when food intake was interrupted for prolonged periods and there was no other source of energy to be had. But with cancer, which puts out lactic acid continuously, it must do it all the time...

As the cancer grows and puts out more and more lactic acid, the body has to work harder and harder to convert the stuff into 'food' for the cancer - with the consequence that, ultimately, the normally expendable resources of the body are used up and the unexpendable ones have to be thrown into the fire. Thus the muscles are literally consumed by cancer's voracious and always growing appetite, and the result is cachexia (wasting away) and death."

Rorvik reports that shortly after Gold had published preliminary reports on the drug's effectiveness on laboratory animals, others, over whom Gold had no control, asserted claims for hydrazine sulfate's power to prevent the liver from manufacturing food for cancer cells. Apparently parts of the cancer hierarchy got ticked off. By the time the substance was being tested at the prestigious Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, something like a feud had sprung up between a number of the persons involved in the Sloan-Kettering testing. S-K's results were negative, but Dr. Gold challenged how the work was done, nor can his objections be brushed away without a hearing in view of the fact that Sloan-Kettering had to confess a serious case of fraudulent laboratory results just a couple of years ago.

In any event, while S-K can't get any positive result from hydrazine sulfate, researchers in another culture and society, not under the institutional press of the heretic hunters at the National Cancer Institute, are getting very different results. The Petrov Research Institute of Oncology in Leningrad announced the results of several studies of hydrazine sulfate, both with positive conclusions. In the second study, the Russian researchers wrote:

"In a series of 95 evaluable, late-stage cancer patients who had become refractory to all usual means of physical and chemical anticancer treatment, administration of hydrazine sulfate produced a 41 per cent objective response and a 55 per cent subjective response. Objective response included measurable tumor regression and stabilization of condition. Subjective response included improvement in general status, and appetite, 'vigor enhancement' and reduction or disappearance of pain."

Hardly a 100 per cent cancer cure, but extraordinarily promising. Certainly these results fairly cry out for further testing not only of hydrazine sulfate but also of Gold's hypothesis that the way to go about therapy is to interrupt the wasting away process - or gluconeogenesis, as the doctors call it. Shortly before the publication of this Russian study but after the release of a previous one with similar positive results, as well as an American study conducted by a drug company, the publication of the American Cancer Society, "CA," printed the following remarks under the heading of "Unproven Methods":

"After careful study of the literature and other available information, the American Cancer Society does not have evidence that hydrazine sulfate is of any objective benefit in the treatment of cancer in human beings."

The testing of a drug is a long, complex and tricky business. No claim is being made here that hydrazine sulfate, a cheap, non-patented substance with many industrial uses in which Dr. Gold has no proprietary interest, has been demonstrated to be of significant help in cancer therapy. All we have is some promising data and some good ideas. That is enough reason to do more work.

Who Says I'm Afraid to Fly?

There is a long-time love-dread relationship between me and planes. On the ground, I am a jet watcher. In the air, I'm a ground watcher. Nothing compares to the grace of silvery flight. And nothing can scare me to death as quickly.

Relax? Never. Only I and the captain listen to the whine of those engines. In turbulent air, I am the only one who notices how much the wing can flex without breaking off. At 30,000 feet, I can spot a solitary flash of lightning 80 miles away.

Quite often, I take a book aboard. Incredibly, I can read one paragraph for an hour without understanding a word. I may be the only passenger who accepts a cocktail with his fists clenched.

Anything that weighs 350,000 pounds has no right in the sky. I know that. The Wright brothers knew it. But the designers don't. They keep making them bigger and bigger.

Someday, a stewardess will greet me saying, "Would you like to bowl awhile or try our Olympic swimming pool?" My well-mannered terror would be more bearable if the airlines would devise a means of getting me on the plane before I can change my mind.

The clerks write tickets as though they're adding the national deficit. They consult books, jot notations while jamming a phone between jaw and shoulder, make little jokes with other clerks as though they know something about this flight that I don't.

The food is uniformly execrable. My dog Charlie Chan would prefer to starve. The plastic dishes, the knives and forks are what the wardens give to lifers with a suicide impulse. Anyone who flies a lot can't be overweight.

Nor has anyone learned how to reunite the passenger with his luggage. My plane always docks at the far end of the airport. Like a herd of goats, we walk and walk, muttering to ourselves and flashing suspicious glances at passengers who walk fast.

Candidly, I do not need the spurious sex of the stewardesses. Some fly faster than the plane. A wiggling behind and jiggling bosom are dross at an altitude of six miles. A few act like girls being paid to look for a husband.

My father was in awe of planes most of his life. He wouldn't board one because he had a height phobia. Anything taller than a bungalow roof made his nose bleed. One day I said, "Why not try it once? The worst that can happen is that you will be killed."

He mulled it. "Dying," he said, "is something I have reserved as the last thing I want to do. But what the heck - you

People who want to worry will find something to scare them. My wife has flown to Europe and back five times, flew around the world twice. She has spanned the continent so many times she nods to mountains she knows.

And yet - and yet she will not board a plane unless she has all of her Mother Cabrini medals and relics. I asked her if it didn't occur to her that Mother Cabrini might be too busy to listen. She might be working on some trivial matter, like war or peace in the Middle East.

"She's never too busy for me," Kelly says. "And if you're hinting that I'm scared, you're damned right I am."

Baker Failed To Break Price Squeeze

WASHINGTON — Donald G. Baker is a decent sort, a lawyer of excellent reputation, with an upright air and a scholarly demeanor. As the Justice Dept.'s antitrust chief, he is supposed to police the cutthroat corporate world. But the business tycoons who inhabit this world make Baker look like Snow White among the seven dwarfs.

He discourses upon the evils of economic concentration; he espouses the theory of antitrust enforcement. But when it comes down to protecting the public from rigged prices and corporate monopolies, Baker has not exactly been a bold champion of vigorous action.

His latest tilt with the barons of Big Business is described in a confidential memo, which was never intended to be circulated outside the Justice Dept. It reveals how he settled a price-fixing case with the two electrical giants, General Electric and Westinghouse, without demanding concessions that might have brought down energy prices.

The pursuit of lower energy prices is one of the top objectives of the federal government. Yet Baker could have broken the price squeeze in return for dropping antitrust allegations against General Electric and Westinghouse, the memo suggests.

Between them, GE and Westinghouse sell 90 per cent of the giant turbine generators, which produce electricity in America's power plants. Each generator costs millions, which, in turn, has an impact on the price that the public eventually must pay for electricity.

The story is worth telling from the beginning. The Justice Dept. charged that for the past 12 years GE and Westinghouse had "deliberately" eliminated price competition in the giant turbine industry. The two companies allegedly accomplished this through an elaborate pricing scheme, which resulted in very similar prices for both GE and Westinghouse turbines.

Baker got an agreement from the two companies to stop "stabilizing" prices through this complex method. Yet GE and Westinghouse had promised the Justice Dept. years ago not to fix the prices of turbine generators. In other words, the companies merely promised again not to do something which they had already sworn never to do.

The agreement was opposed by two senior antitrust officials, Bernard Hollander and Richard Stern. The determined Stern put his objections in a confidential memo, which he submitted to Baker shortly before the settlement was approved.

Stern reminded Baker that Westinghouse was "extremely anxious" to settle the price-fixing case. This gave the Justice Dept. an opportunity to gain some important concessions from Westinghouse in a separate but related antitrust case, Stern pleaded.

In the latter case, Westinghouse allegedly used its contracts with the Mitsubishi Company to prevent the Japanese firm from shipping giant turbine generators to the United States.

The entry of Mitsubishi into the American market, Stern contends, would cause a "sharp price drop." He, therefore, "strongly urged" Baker as part of the settlement to insist "that Westinghouse agree to permit Mitsubishi to ship turbine generators to the U.S."

The memo concludes forcefully: "For the Antitrust Division to fail to grasp this unique opportunity to bring in new competition, and thus relieve the energy sector, and the public generally, from the poor state of competition in the domestic turbine-generator industry, appears to me to be a grave mistake."

Footnote: In a telephone interview with our reporters Gary Cohn and Richard Sokolow, Baker said he approved the settlement because the government got all the relief it was seeking. He acknowledged that both Stern and Hollander had opposed the agreement but said Stern's memo called for "an inappropriate use of prosecutorial discretion." Both Stern and Hollander refused to comment.

ANOTHER FIX? Another price-fixing case, involving the giant Atlantic Richfield oil combine, will be presented to a California grand jury this week.

The case has been prepared secretly by investigators from the district attorney's offices in Los Angeles and San Diego. Price fixing is a serious crime in California, where it is considered to be a felony. The prosecutors are expected to seek criminal indictments against both the company and the responsible executives.

The investigation has been kept hush-hush. But we have learned from insiders that the state's case will probably be similar to a lawsuit, which has been brought against Atlantic Richfield (ARCO) by franchised dealers in southern California.

In affidavits prepared for the civil suit, former ARCO sales representatives and dealers will describe attempts to control their prices by coercion. Many of these people are expected to be called before the grand jury.

Rhodesian Clergymen Are Slain

MUSAMI, Rhodesia (UPI)

—Black guerrillas herded eight Roman Catholic missionaries together and shot seven of them to death in the worst attack against clergymen in the Rhodesian guerrilla war, the only survivor said today.

"We want our country," one of the guerrillas was quoted as telling nuns at the mission where the slaughter took place.

Three of the dead were priests from England, Ireland and Kenya. The others slain included three nuns from West Germany and one from England.

The only victims immediately identified were Rev. Martin Thomas of England; Rev. Christopher Shepherd-Smith of Kenya and Rev. John Conway of Ireland.

All were working at the St. Joseph's Mission on the Mangwende tribal trust land 40 miles east of Salisbury.

The Rev. Dunstan Myerscough, 65, of Preston, England, said he survived only because he fell to the ground "from instinct" when the guerrillas started shooting.

Myerscough said that shortly before 10 p.m. Sunday there was a knock on his door and "I opened the door and walked into the wrong end of a gun."

One of the guerrillas rushed the group out of the building and 100 yards down a dirt road and ordered them to stand there.

He said the guerrillas then appeared to be discussing who should do the shooting.

"Eventually they had three people there and they said (to the other guerrillas), 'right, off you go' or some such words, and the rest of the bunch scampered off north."

"Then these three opened fire," Myerscough said.

"As soon as I saw the bursts fired from, I think, the middle gun, I sort of — I don't know whether instinctively or imagining I was hit or what — I fell flat down."

Myerscough said when the firing stopped, he discovered he had not been hit.

He said the entire incident last about half an hour.

At the mission 67-year-old Sister Anna said she was spared because she was crippled with arthritis.

Police Supt. John Potter said the guerrillas grabbed one African sister and shoved her into another room with a group of novices, saying "we want our country."

Blaze Destroys Accord House

ACCORD — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lenny Durell, Granit Road, Accord, was heavily engulfed in flames Sunday when Accord and Allgerville firemen arrived in time to save five dogs who were in the basement while their owners were away.

Eighty per cent of the two-story house was lost, according to Accord Fire Chief Lowell Baker, who said the blaze apparently started under a porch shortly before 4 p.m.

Thirty-five firemen fought the fire until 6 p.m. There were no injuries and no estimate of damage.

Ouster Urged

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)

—An estimated 200,000 persons turned out Sunday to hear Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's political opponents urge her ouster in next month's national elections. They said the choice was "between democracy and dictatorship, between freedom and slavery."

The rally featured Jagjivan Ram, the popular leader of India's 120 million untouchables who resigned from Mrs. Gandhi's cabinet last week, and Jayaprakash Narayan, who was Mrs. Gandhi's leading opponent before she imposed a nationwide state of emergency 19 months ago.

tioners and their counsel claimed the town's ratio was not correct. Choosing a half dozen land parcels on the rolls, they were able to demonstrate the town's real ratio of assessed value to the fair value was closer to five or six percent rather than 14 per cent.

Said Gruner, "The town's argument did not hold up. It was obvious from the specific properties we selected for submission that the properties of certain people in Saugerties were assessed at far less than our Glasco people's were assessed at."

One example used was the former Fabiano property, which commands a view of the Hudson and which was sold in March of 1974 for $95,000. It was assessed at only $4,700—a ratio of .049 per cent, or far less than the 14 per cent claimed by Pavlovich and the board.

A second example offered was the former Silinovich property, sold in July of 1974 for $43,000. Assessed at only $2,200, the ratio was calculated at .051 per cent—again far removed from the 14 per cent rule supposedly used.

Among the petitioners in the two suits handled by Riseley and Gruno were Wilson & Mason, Inc. (owners of a Barclay Heights house), and a number of Glasco homeowners, including Fannie Mauro and Peter Fondino. A third suit, which the court allowed to be tied in with the two other cases, involved Joseph and Anna Greco, and other Glasco taxpayers, with G. Thomas Rea Jr. appearing as counsel.

The final culmination of the court action, which involved a wide range of assessments for the years 1972, and 1974 through 1976, assures that the more than 20 assessments involved will be reduced.

The amount of money to be returned to the petitioners is dependent on the Board of Assessor's reduction of the assessments. While a settlement agreement has been reached, payment of monies involved will not be made until school district and town officials set a complete financial settlement. Gruner estimates, however, that the total settlement in this particular case will range between $9,000 and $10,000.

And both he and Riseley are convinced that lawsuits of this type will become more frequent and more widely prevalent in the future. Eventually, Saugerties officials must make an across-the-board, dollar value offer on each assessment in this case, a move which is expected to encourage more challenges to town assessments.

The most significant thing about the Saugerties suit, they suggested, is that the tax certiorari law allows the individual property owner to join with others in his town or district to battle against assessments in court on an economically feasible basis.

Said Gruner, "This gives the small guy a chance, since the group can get up a war chest for attorney's fees. A shopping center or apartment complex can afford court costs, it's worth it to them. But, for the individual property owner in the past, any victory has been a pyrrhic one only, since court costs added up to more than the tax savings involved."

siderable amount of stock.

Located next to it, at 496 Albany Ave., is the Touch of Class Beauty Salon, which firemen said received damage to the roof, rear second floor porch and siding.

Sparkle Plenty Car Wash at 486 Albany Ave., was damaged on the roof rafters and the ceiling of its boiler room.

The injured firemen, some of whom were treated and released from the hospital, include Capt. Robert Priest, who sustained bruises to the left eye, caused by falling debris.

Firefighter John Reinhardt injured his right knee slipping on the ice as he was moving a hose.

Edward Albrecht was knocked over by back pressure on a hose line and injured his right elbow, wrist and back. Although he was released from the hospital, he was relieved from duty.

Firefighter Dennis Miller bruised his left hand when he slipped and fell, and two volunteer firemen, Ronald Keller and Gilbert Styles, suffered exposure and possible frostbite.

Nine pieces of fire equipment and two additional pieces of apparatus on standby were called into action after the initial alarm sounded around 6 p.m. Saturday night.

Some equipment remained on the scene until about 5 p.m. Sunday in the event any of the burning debris flared up again.

The Warehouse building was completely ablaze when firemen first arrived with flames shooting out the front and the rear of the building.

Concrete blocks, which once were part of the building's facade, lay scattered in front of the sewing center.

Part of the storage area was also occupied by Spiegel Bros. paper products, while the second story of the beauty salon was owned and occupied by Anthony Peone, firemen said. Sparkle Plenty Car Wash is owned by Frank Rinaudo of Highland.

Vogt says he favors some legislation which would permit juveniles who are charged with serious crimes of violence to be handled as adults in some cases, and tried before a criminal court.

The would-be judge doesn't stop at the defendants, however.

He would also keep a tight rein on defense attorneys who use delaying tactics or consistently don't show up at calendar calls for their cases.

"I'm not being critical of anybody, but I would be a little less leisurely in conducting the court."

"My approach to the office is that we cannot afford as many adjournments as we now grant as a matter of course. Delays always favor a defendant. Sometimes it takes a tough judge to get things going," he said.

Vogt said that at the present time he is not expecting any fight for the GOP nod. "I have heard several names mentioned, but I have no confirmation of opposition," he said.

One of those names is Kingston attorney Joseph Saccaman who unsuccessfully ran for the Supreme Court seat from the Third Judicial District last year.

Saccaman, who was unavailable for comment today, has been making some inquiries around the county as to his political viability in the race and may challenge Vogt at the party's nominating convention sometime in April or May.

Vogt's first assistant, Michael Kavanagh, will formally announce his candidacy for the D.A.'s job on Wednesday.

Adsit stated that late Saturday all information requests on available equipment were sent through a central information clearing house and will be distributed to the towns in the disaster area.

"Drawing from that information, we will be contacted directly by the highway departments which need help," he added.

Ulster County equipment which is serviced and ready to roll this morning includes a snow blower, two bulldozers and a front end loader.

The machinery is loaded onto flat-bed trucks and Deputy Highway Superintendent Richard Gray had planned to make the trip west with the operators, a foreman and a mechanic.

The announcement of the aid came Friday from legislature Highway Committee Chairman Phillip Davis of Kerhonkson.

Odetta... 'the most glorious voice in American Folk Music.'

Sandy Underwood Photographer

Diane Edwards will appear in the Cincinnati Ballet Company's production of "With Timbrel and Dance, Praise His Name," scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 17, at Ulster County Community College, Stone Ridge. The program will be sponsored by Ulster Community College Foundation to raise funds for student scholarships and special development programs.

Foundation's First Major Fund-raiser

Spectacular Concert at UCCC to Benefit Students

STONE RIDGE—A spectacular concert featuring the Cincinnati Ballet, Hudson Valley Philharmonic and the renowned folk singer Odetta will be presented Thursday, Feb. 17, at the Stone Ridge campus of Ulster County Community College.

This program is the first major fund-raising project of the recently established Ulster Community College Foundation. Proceeds from the concert will be used for student scholarships and special development programs at the college.

The performance will feature "With Timbrel and Dance Praise His Name" choreographed by James Truitte. The score, composed and adapted by the troupe's music director, Carmen DeLeone, ranges from African chants through spirituals to Duke Ellington. The Cincinnati Ballet Company has chosen this work as its Bicentennial salute to the century-old cradle of blues, rock, jazz, folk and work music as we know it today—the Negro spiritual.

Odetta, one of the leading folk singers in the nation, has been closely associated with spiritual folk music for some time, and has been praised by a New York Times critic for having "the most glorious voice in American folk music."

In 1949, she was accepted for the chorus in a Los Angeles production of "Finian's Rainbow." During this period, several of her friends were deeply interested in folk music. After hearing some, she decided she preferred it to other musical forms. "I knew I was home," she said.

She taught herself to play guitar and began performing in small folk music establishments. She won a year's engagement at the Tin Angel in San Francisco and as her reputation grew she came east to the Blue Angel in New York. Here such artists as Pete Seeger and Harry Belafonte became impressed with her talent. She returned to California to sing the chantey "Santy Anno" in the movie "Cinerama Holiday," then appeared at the Los Angeles Turnabout Theater. Her first LP was turned out by Tradition Records in 1956. She quickly established herself as a performer touring the U.S. and Canada. Her Town Hall debut won rave notices, and she subsequently starred on television specials, was praised for a Carnegie Hall recital and became a regular performer at the Newport Folk Festival.

The first half of this program will be devoted to classical ballet, while the second half will feature "With Timbrel and Dance Praise His Name." This special program is partially funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts' Dance Touring Program, and by a grant to the Hudson Valley Philharmonic from the New York State Council on the Arts through its Cooperative Area Music Program.

The concert will be presented in the Senate Gymnasium on the Stone Ridge campus. All tickets are $5 and may be obtained at Abrams Music Center in Kingston; the Woodstock Sound Center or by calling the College Development Office at the Stone Ridge campus.

Senate House Slide Show Available to Groups

KINGSTON—In response to numerous inquiries from Kingston and the surrounding community, the staff of the Senate House State Historic Site has put together a slide show about the work that has been done at the site during the past two years of expansion. Considerable research has netted several important changes or alterations to the site's presentation.

The program is prepared for showing to interested organizations sometime in the coming months. This service will be free of charge and one of the Senate House staff members will present the show using their slide projector and screen. The presentation will take about 30 minutes plus time for a question and answer period. All that will be necessary for the group to provide is a room large enough for the audience, chairs, and a place to plug in the projector. Arrangements may be made with either Corwin Sharp or Kate Mearns at the Senate House Museum.

Outstanding Teens Are Selected

RHINEBECK—Sandra Stash of Red Hook High School and Donald Fleming of Rhinebeck Central School were selected as honorees in the recent judging for Outstanding Teenage Young Man and Woman of Region 2 which includes the counties of Columbia, North Dutchess, Greene, Ulster, Orange and Sullivan Counties. The two young people were sponsored by Red Hook-Rhinebeck Jaycees and Jaynees. They will be eligible for the state finals to be held at Turf Inn and Americana Hotel in Colonie, Feb. 25 and 26. At this event, representatives from the 10 regions will gather and honorees will be selected for this year.

HVP Chamber Music Concert 'Unusual but Worthwhile'

By O. Lincoln Igou

Another of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic's Winter Chamber Music Series was presented yesterday afternoon in Holy Cross Church. The artists were Terry Champlin, Tacy Edwards, and Stephanie Fricker, performing on guitar, flute, and viola respectively. Champlin studied with Luis Garcia-Renart, and now teaches at Bard College. Tacy Edwards is first flutist of the Philharmonic and Stephanie Fricker is its principal violist. The acoustics of the Holy Cross Hall, its sanctuary, are remarkable, as those who have been there already know.

The opening work was a "Burlesca for Flute and Guitar" by Nicholas Flagello, a composition teacher at his alma mater, the Manhattan School of Music. Generally a fast-moving work but with slower sections especially at each end, it was neither impudent, musically humorous, nor in any other way comical. Written in a cross between bitonal and atonal idioms, the notes rippled and swirled along gaily and easily. Ms. Edwards, as attractive as she is accomplished flutist, carried the major responsibility with the greatest of ease, producing a beautiful tone which never betrayed the slightest hint of breathiness or change of register throughout the program.

Mr. Champlin's solo performance of his arrangement of Bach's "Sonata No. 1 in G Minor for Solo Violin" served to remind one of the vast range of musical resources which lie waiting to be tapped by those skilled enough to treat the guitar with the respect of a capable and serious musical instrument, as it has been for the past three or four centuries. Its close forerunner, the lute, is even older. One needs hear only a few measures of guitar or lute music to realize how many musical worlds separate it (them) from the superficially related banjo and ukelele.

The opening movement of the Bach sonata was characterized by a great variety of timbres (tone colors), but music in which the melodic line always stood out in clear contrast to the background. The guitar seemed to enhance the introspective flexibility which Bach certainly must have intended. But also, as one listener remarked: "It is almost impossible to dissociate the guitar from romantic implications." The second movement fugue was also handled with a skill which, as with similar exact imitative contrapuntal forms played on the violin, has always been beyond the conception of this wind musician. The scoring and playing on the guitar must be even more difficult than on a bowed instrument, since so much more of the total polyphonic web is kept going at the same time. Three, or even four, successive entrances of the subject follow one another at one or two measure intervals. Yet the whole movement was presented with a subdued, mellow tone that illusively negated the technical complexity that is most certainly there. The telling piano dynamics continued into the third movement, until the sonata was brought to a close with an unhurried presto where, true to Baroque custom, the succession of running fast notes was never interrupted.

A Martin Kraus "Sonata for Flute and Viola" concluded the first half of the program. Born near Mainz in the same year as Mozart, and surviving him by only one year, the composer spent most of his productive years in Stockholm. The three-movement composition (the third being an unusually short but straightforward rondo) made considerable technical demands on both musicians in the opening Allegro. However, the easily rushing pace of the performance was so smoothly handled that no sense of tension, physical or musical, could be perceived. In addition to the rapid passage work, Ms. Fricker took in stride reappearing double stop figures. There was a good balance between the two instruments throughout, with the possible exception of the opening of the slow movement.

Ms. Fricker joined Mr. Champlin in his arrangement of "Six Studies in English Folksongs" of Vaughn-Williams. The first four of the set were slow, short, and uninvolved songs with the melodic line falling to the viola, while the guitar provided accompanying or tonal melodic materials. The tempo picked up in "The Lady and the Dragon," although not as much as the title might intimate. One noted more of the atmosphere of Beauty and the Beast, and considerable dialogue. The final song, a jig tune, moved along with divided instrumental emphasis to a sudden and unexpected ending.

The final "Sonata da Camera," for all three instruments, was written by Jarrian Andriessen, son of a composer heard on last week's full Philharmonic Concert. Born in 1925, he was in the United States 1948-1950, at the Berkshire Center, and a student of Copland. He has written in a variety of styles from a synthesis of jazz and symphonic music to variations on a theme from Berg's "Lyric Suite." The four-movement chamber sonata seems to be more nearly bi- or even tri-tonal than atonal, though the effect is considerably more subtle and complex than the earlier essays in this direction by Darius Milhaud. In a completely different direction, the musical materials are treated somewhat akin to Sibelius, with initial fragments and tonalities coming closer and closer together. Musical motives also become echoed increasingly in other instruments until the work ends, not totally unpredictably, on a unison. Both the composition and its sympathetic, professional performance provided a proper conclusion to an unusual but very worth while concert.

DEAR ABBY

Does It Pay to Be a Lady?

DEAR ABBY: Does it pay to be a lady these days? I kept steady company with a gentleman for eight years. He is now 74 and I am 66. I didn't believe in going all the way before marriage, and told him so repeatedly, so we just went together and had nice clean fun.

I had a friend (about my age) who was also a widow. She had a gentleman friend with whom she traveled and spent weekends. They were going all the way without any pretenses, and he finally married her. Now she is living like a queen and having a ball.

Three months ago, my gentleman friend dropped me for a woman who would go all the way. And after I went steady with him for eight years!

To me, adultery is adultery whether you're 16 or 70. I ask you, does it pay to be a lady anymore?—A LADY.

DEAR LADY: Only you can answer that question. If you have regrets, it doesn't pay. If you haven't, it paid.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow who lives alone. I am fairly well to do and want for nothing. My problem is my son-in-law. He has "sticky fingers."

He has ripped me off several times; cash from my purse (anywhere from $10 to $100 at a time) and little things he can pick up. (Transistor radio, camera, binoculars, etc.)

He and my daughter have two beautiful children, and it would break her heart if she knew what kind of man she's married to.

I'm afraid if I were to tell her she'd take his part, as she probably should. Then I would be deprived of her company and of the joy of seeing my precious grandchildren.

I don't know how to handle this. I provide them with so many things they otherwise wouldn't have. He is a fairly good father and husband, but he is a spendthrift and very immature.

Is there some way I can put a stop to his stealing from me without damaging the relationship between my daughter and me? NO WAY OUT.

DEAR NO WAY: Why must you tell her? Tell HIM. But you had better be sure that your suspicions are correct before making any accusations.

DEAR ABBY: My husband travels constantly by automobile. He is self-employed. Recently he took a female employee along on one of his trips. He asked my permission first, and I agreed. The only stipulation I made was that if she ever became a threat to our marriage he would let her go. (We've been married over 25 years and have always had a good, solid relationship.)

Within a few weeks I learned they have been sharing a motel room. Both were indignant and insulted when I objected. My husband said it was strictly a business arrangement, and he was only cutting expenses. They both insist this is a common practice with traveling men. Maybe I'm behind the times, but I never heard of this before. Have you?—TENSE IN TOLEDO.

DEAR TENSE: No. And if you hold still for that kind of "economizing," I suggest that you use the money he's saved to have your head examined.

Dems Set 1st Legislature Caucus

ROCHESTER — The first of a round of promised local legislature caucuses by Democratic officials will take place Tuesday, Feb. 8 at Tessler's Hotel in Rochester.

All thirteen Democrats in the legislature will caucus at 7:30 p.m. and then open the meeting to the public at 8 p.m.

The Rochester Taxpayer's Association is sponsoring the meeting, and the proposed themes for discussion are welfare, property and school taxes.

The 1977 Democratic platform promised to "encourage public communication with the legislature" by rotating monthly party caucuses throughout the legislative districts and opening up portions of them to the public.

How to Pick Sleepers in Rare Plates

NORTHBROOK, Ill. — The director of a worldwide art exchange in this Chicago suburb has announced a new, easy way to start collecting rare porcelain plates with high resale potential.

According to Roderick MacArthur, director of the Bradford Exchange, one exceptional plate priced at $25 in 1965 now brings $1,750, and another selling at $9.75 in 1969 now sells for $440.

Mr. MacArthur says, "Since many plates do not increase in value, amateurs often make serious mistakes." He offers a free report on what to look for, when to buy, what to pay and much more. It even includes special offers on eagerly-sought collector plates at modest cost.

To get your free report with no obligation, just send your name, address, and zip code to the Bradford Exchange, No. 689, Bradford Place, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. To be sure of receiving your free copy, mail your request before Saturday of next week.

Getting The Concorde Off The Ground

PARISUPI — One year after the supersonic Concorde inaugurated commercial flights to the United States, France and Great Britain soon will find out if their costly jetliner will ever get off the ground financially.

The Concorde's fate lies in the hands of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

The authority had announced it would hand down a decision on Feb. 10 on whether it will allow the controversial jetliner to land at John F. Kennedy airport. But last Thursday it postponed action for at least another month.

"Not all the data necessary for the decision has come in," a spokesman for the Port Authority said. He said the decision probably will be made at the PA's next regular meeting on March 10.

Both airlines are banking on servicing New York — "the key point of our supersonic network," according to Gilbert Peyrol, Air France general manager.

Currently, Air France flies from Paris, and British Airways from London, into Washington.

The Port Authority decision also may deeply affect relations among the three countries concerned. In France and Britain, labor unions already are speaking of economic retaliations against the United States if the "plane of the future" is rejected.

An example of what the unions have in mind was provided last week when French aeronautics workers called a general boycott of American products to protest Western Airlines' decision to buy American planes instead of the Franco-German Airbus.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said last Saturday he had stressed the importance of the New York decision to Vice President Walter Mondale, President Carter's goodwill envoy. French officials also have indicated that, if Concorde is rejected, France may well turn to the Soviet Union and offer its technological help for the Soviets' supersonic TU144 in exchange for allowing Concorde to overfly Siberia en route to Tokyo.

Air France and British Airways claim Concordes satisfied the norms in noise and air pollution set by the Port Authority.

If so, this would take much of the heat off environmental arguments for banning Concorde from New York.

The Concorde, which flies at twice the speed of sound, cost Britain and France nearly $3 billion to develop and produce. It sells for about $35 million and thus far only nine have been purchased: five by British Airways and four by Air France.

UCCC Is Ready For Rematch With Westcos

STATEN ISLAND — The setting for Ulster County Community College's big rematch with second-ranked Westchester in the Senate Gym Tuesday night was completed here Sunday when the Senators posted their 18th victory and 13th in a row by a 90-83 count over host Staten Island.

"I was afraid we'd be looking past this one," said a relieved UCCC coach Mike Perry afterwards. "We almost were, but Corey Chambers played his best half ever for us. They had it down to about five points with 40 seconds left, but Chambers got five of our last six points."

Chambers came out of the middle position in the lane to follow a missed free throw by Steve Watts, then he rammed home a threepoint play to cap Ulster's scoring and secure the victory. Those were the last of his team-high 27 points, 21 of which he scored in the second half in an eight-of-nine shooting performance.

The Senators had beaten the Dolphins earlier in the year, but the score had been close, the game was at Ulster, and SI suffered through a slow start this season. The Dolphins had put together a 14-5 record since then, with their latest success an impressive 19-point romp over Rockland. To add to Ulster's difficulty this contest was sandwiched between three light UCCC foes and Westchester.

"Evan Pickman thought he'd catch us looking too," said Perry of his Staten Island counterpart.

The Senators came out strongly, however, jumping to a fast, 25-9 lead the Dolphins never quite made up.

UCCC maintained about a ten-point bulge throughout, faltering only just before halftime and just before Chambers' spurt at the finish.

Perry was a little upset with Chambers at halftime. "He took a shot when we were in our four-corner offense and missed it," Perry said. That led to back-to-back SI buckets, so the Senators went in at intermission with just a 45-40 lead. Chambers more than made up for it in the second stanza.

Both teams shot well over 60 percent from the field, a stat that came from a preponderance of layups both ways. UCCC recorded 20 layups out of 39 field goals as speedy Ray Younger helped it along scoring 22 points. "Super" Nat Harris, SI's answer to Younger, poured in 35 points to lead the Dolphins as he also got his share of fast breaks.

Phil Blount with 14 and Steve Watts with 11 were Ulster's only other double figure shooters. Ray Rudolph, a 6-6 cornerman, had 15 for Staten Island.

Ulster now takes an 18-4 record against Westchester's 21-1 mark. The 13-game winning streak of the Senators ties the mark for the region's longest this year. Westchester and Farmingdale suffered their only losses after 13 straight wins.

Rangers' Dave Maloney, right, is tackled by J. P. Parise

Soetaert Was Up To Important Task

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sleep came uneasily for Doug Soetaert Saturday night. Mostly there was tossing and turning and thinking. The New York Rangers' rookie goaltender anticipated an important evening ahead of him.

"I had a feeling from reading the papers that I might be starting tonight," Soetaert said Sunday following his first National Hockey League shutout, a 4-0 victory over the New York Islanders.

What Soetaert had read in the newspapers was the comments of Rangers' Coach John Ferguson, who called Gilles Gratton's goaltending in a 6-3 loss to the Islanders Thursday night below NHL standards.

The Rangers had won but two of their last 13 games before Sunday and had not beaten the Islanders in four games dating back to last March.

But the Rangers were given a lift early. On the Islanders' first shot Soetaert stopped a 35-foot wrist shot by Denis Potvin, then covered the rebound after it had slipped behind him and slid toward the goal.

"I started off shaky when that first shot almost went in," said Soetaert, who stopped 36 shots. "That was some wrist shot, I'll tell ya. The luck seemed to be with me. But it's about time we got a little luck."

At 5:39 Dan Newman received a double-minor penalty for fighting, but the Islanders failed to get a shot during their four-minute power play.

The Rangers followed their escape from those two precarious situations by taking control of the hard-hitting game. They scored three goals within a six-minute span in the first period and were never threatened again.

Ken Hodge beat Islander goalie Bill Smith from in close on an assist from Phil Esposito at 10:29 to open the scoring. Esposito converted a pass from Don Murdoch during a power play at 13:23 and Steve Vickers beat Smith at 16:08 to complete the Rangers' first-period scoring. Greg Polis poked in a rebound at 7:46 of the second period to close the Rangers' scoring.

Soetaert, who was recalled from the minors in December when starting goalie John Davidson injured his knee, was making only his eighth appearance of the year. He appeared in eight games last season for the Rangers.

"I can't compliment the guys enough," the 21-year-old Soetaert said. "The whole defense was super. They were knocking down everyone in front of the net and making them shoot from tough angles."

"The kid was very sharp," Ferguson said.

51 Goals, 49 Games
As professional hockey takes on more of a European accent, fans in North America had better become accustomed to seeing some of their cherished records going to players with strange sounding names.

Such a situation occurred Sunday night when Anders Hedberg, a Swedish import who is virtually unknown to most followers of the National Hockey League, shattered one of the

WHA

Rusty Patenaude had a goal and an assist to lead Edmonton over San Diego; Curt Brackenbury's two goals powered Quebec over Cincinnati; and Jack Carlson scored with 2:38 left in the third period to enable New England to deadlock Indianapolis.

Nets Add Cavaliers To List of Victims

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — The New York Nets have won just 16 games this season but the last three have come in a row and have come against some very impressive opposition.

The Nets extended their longest winning streak of the season with a 94-90 victory Sunday afternoon over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"These three road victories have been very rewarding to me, especially when you beat Boston, Philadelphia and Cleveland in order," said Nets' Coach Kevin Loughery. "These victories show that hard work can be successful and all I ask of the team if 100 per cent for 82 games."

Robert "Bubbles" Hawkins, who was unemployed for three weeks after being waived by Golden State, exploded for a career-high of 37 points against the Cavs but the second-year guard from Illinois State says he is not a shooter.

"While in college I was always a good team player and didn't go out to score 30 points every game," said Hawkins. "I don't have any best shots. If I start out missing I just play the game and see what I can do."

Hawkins hit on 15 of 20 from the field and dropped in seven of 13 foul shots. After Jan van Breda Kolff and Al Skinner combined for 21 points to help the Nets to a 26-15 first period lead, Hawkins came in to toss in 14 second period points including eight in the final minutes of the first half when the Nets outscored the Cavs 13-2 after watching their lead cut to 33-31.

The Cavs, who trailed from the opening tip, cut the lead to 65-57 after three periods and Elmore Smith's stuff shot evened it at 88 with 50 seconds left in the game.

Skinner followed with a 10-footer 20 seconds later and a charging foul on Cleveland guard Gary Brokaw gave the ball back to New York with 20 seconds left. Hawkins dropped in a pair of foul shots with 16 seconds remaining to put the game out of reach.

"I don't believe this team will crack. They are a bunch of unselfish guys and these victories are a tribute to the team," said Loughery.

With Cleveland center Nate Thurmond sitting home with the flu, Smith saw 19 minutes of action. The big 7-foot center scored 12 points, grabbed nine rebounds and blocked four shots.

Skinner and Mike Bantom chipped in 17 apiece for the Nets.

Jazz 99, Rockets 90
Mardi Gras may be underway, but Pete Maravich and E. C. Coleman have got a two-man show of their own.

Maravich, King Rex of the New Orleans Jazz, scored 43 points Sunday afternoon in a 99-90 victory over the Houston Rockets. But it was Coleman, the team's defensive wizard, who did the real damage.

Coleman held Rudy Tomjanovich, Houston's leading scorer to just one point, in a performance that left New Orleans' Coach Elgin Baylor stumbling over his words like a Bourbon Street drunk.

"It was really unreal," Baylor said. "What he did was really impossible. I never saw a guy shut out completely like that."

Coleman, in his third year with the Jazz, is not a household name in basketball circles. But those who go up against him every night know how troublesome he can be.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Boston took Buffalo 113-97, Philadelphia defeated Los Angeles 102-97, Indiana topped Chicago 111-99, Detroit stopped Kansas City 130-111, San Antonio whipped the New York Knicks 119-96, Phoenix beat Denver 115-104 and Seattle defeated Milwaukee 107-99.

Celtics 113, Braves 97
sDave Cowens finished with 28 points and 19 rebounds to pace a fourth-quarter Boston surge. John Havlicek added 22 and Sidney Wicks 21 for the Celtics. Buffalo was led by Randy Smith's 22 points and John Shumate's 19.

76ers 102, Lakers 97
Steve Mix fired in 37 points, including 15 each in the second and third quarters, to power Philadelphia. Lloyd Free contributed 15 for the Atlantic Division leaders and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar topped Los Angeles with 26.

Pacers 111, Bulls 99
Billy Knight, the league's third-highest scorer, had 23 points and Wil Jones 20 to carry Indiana. Dan Roundfield added 16 points for the winners, while Norm Norm Van Lier and Artis Gilmore topped Chicago with 19 each.

Pistons 130, Kings 111
Bob Lanier, who was ejected in the third quarter after decking Kansas City's Jim Eakins with one punch, scored 20 points to spark Detroit. Howard Porter had 18 and Ralph Simpson and M. L. Carr 17 each for the Pistons as Kevin Porter set a team record with seven steals. Ron Boone had 20 points for the losers.

Spurs 119, Knicks 96
Larry Kenon had 24 points and George Gervin 23 as San Antonio rolled to seventh win in its last nine games. Mo Layton led New York with 19, which has now dropped nine of its last 10 road games.

Suns 115, Nuggets 104
Paul Westphal scored 32 points, Ron Lee 30 and Alvan Adams 26 to lead Phoenix, while David Thompson had 27 and Dan Issel 24 for Denver.

SuperSonics 107, Bucks 99
Bruce Seals scored 17 points in the second half and Fred Brown hit four jump shots in the final quarter to pace Seattle over Milwaukee. Each finished with 22 points and guard Bob Wilkerson added 11 assists for the Sonics.

He Never Thought He'd Win

A Surprise for Lietzke

HONOLULU (UPI) — As Bruce Lietzke stood on the 10th tee of the sun-drenched Waialae Country Club course Sunday, the farthest thing from his mind was winning the $48,000 first prize money of the Hawaiian Open.

At that point, the lanky Texan stood one stroke behind Don January, with whom he shared the third-round lead, and Lanny Wadkins. He said afterwards he was thinking in terms of taking home second or third place money from the $240,000 event.

"After being even-par (through the front nine), I thought the Hawaiian Open wasn't in my grasp. I was thinking of second or third place," said Lietzke.

It turned out a whole lot different in the end for the man who has been the PGA's most consistent player on this year's winter tour with 16 consecutive rounds of par or better golf.

Although he bogeyed a hole along the way, Lietzke had two birdies and a crowning eagle three on the final hole to zoom in three strokes ahead of January, who ran into sand problems, and Japan's Takashi Murakami.

Lietzke's three-under-par 69 gave him an overall 273 with the weather-beaten January (72) and Murakami (69) at 276.

Even as he got ready to tee off on the crucial 17th Lietzke wasn't sure of where he stood.

"I didn't know what happened to Don," he said, "but someone told me." What someone whispered to the eventual winner was that January failed to blast out of a bunker on the par-three, 180-yard hole and took a doublebogey to put Lietzke in front by a stroke.

As for winding it up on the 18th, he added, "I knew all I needed was a par. After I saw Don miss his birdie try while standing on the fairway, I prepared myself for what I had to do."

He had par in mind, but after knocking his second shot to within 10 feet of the cup, the long-hitting Lietzke continued his aggressive play on the par-fives and rammed home the eagle.

Marquette Nearly Put an End to Cincinnati's Streak

CINCINNATI (UPI)—With Cincinnati's game Sunday on the Bearcats' home court, Coach Gale Catlett could figure his 100th win to come easily. Looking at his opponent — fourth-ranked Marquette — made him rethink the question.

The Warriors came onto the Riverfront Coliseum court with a 10-game winning streak and a 14-2 record. They nearly made it 15-2 with a furious closing-minutes comeback, but a 35-foot desperation shot by Butch Lee fell short and Bo Ellis' bucket was ruled after the buzzer as 11th-rated Cincinnati held on for a 63-62 triumph.

"That's as well as anybody can play us on our home court," said Catlett of his team's 57th straight home court victory before a regional

TV audience. "It's something to get 100 at my age of 36, but if the next 100 are as complicated as the first 100 I probably won't be able to make it through it."

One of the most successful young coaches in the country, Catlett now has a 100-32 record for his 4½ years at Cincinnati, including a 16-3 mark this season. The last time the Bearcats lost at home was more than four years ago, a 74-72 setback by Drake on Jan. 26, 1973.

"There's no doubt about it," said Bearcats hero Mike Jones, "our home court and crowd really help us. I figure we have a 12-point advantage any time we play at home."

Jones, a 6-5 junior forward, scored a game-high 20 points and pulled down a team-high 10 rebounds. Brian Williams added 14 points for Cincinnati, while teammate Gary Yoder scored 12 and Bob Miller contributed 11.

"I don't think we can play much better than we played today," said Marquette Coach Al McGuire. "Cincinnati had us on the ropes seven or eight times and we just hung in by our fingertips. Everytime we got going, Cincinnati broke our momentum. Cincinnati is definitely a tournament team."

Cincinnati held a comfortable 63-54 lead with 2:25 remaining, but never scored again as Marquette, now 14-3, reeled off eight straight points capped by Jerome Whitehead bringing the Warriors to within 63-62 with seven seconds remaining.

With four seconds to go, Miller missed a free throw and the ball went out of bounds to give Marquette the ball, but Lee's attempt fell short.

Lee's 19 points led the Warriors, with Ellis and Whitehead adding 12 each.

In another big game Sunday, No. 7 Louisville had trouble with Providence before pulling out a 68-64 triumph over the 17th-ranked Friars, who got no help from the officials. Home team Louisville was not called for a single foul.

Freshman guard Darrell Griffith canned two free throws with 1:29 remaining and added a breakaway slam dunk at the buzzer as the Cardinals won a school record-tying 14th straight victory in the national TV game.

Senior forward Wesley Cox revived Louisville's spurting offense in the last half after Providence erased a 39-26 Cardinal halftime lead. His tip-in put Louisville, now 17-2, in front 55-54 with 8:24 remaining and then he connected on a 10-foot jump shot. Griffith stretched the Louisville margin to 59-54 with a left-handed stuff.

Cox topped Louisville with 18 points, followed by Larry Williams with 16, Rick Wilson 13 and Griffith with 11. Joe Hassett netted 22 points to lead all scorers for the Friars, who had a 14-game winning streak snapped and fell to 18-3.

In the only other major game played Sunday, Alex Eldridge's short jumper with two seconds left boosted Massachusetts over Pittsburgh, 75-71.

On Saturday, top-ranked San Francisco remained unbeaten with a 98-81 victory over Nevada-Reno, second-rated UCLA defeated Washington State 72-59, third-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas edged Rutgers 89-88, No. 5 Michigan scored a 93-72 victory over Ohio State, sixth-ranked Kentucky routed Vanderbilt 113-73, No. 7 Louisville thrashed Memphis State 111-92, eighth-rated Wake Forest took an 80-72 victory over Virginia, ninth-ranked Alabama overtimed LSU 77-70, No. 10 Tennessee topped Auburn 93-83, 12th-rated North Carolina defeated Furman 88ul, 13th-ranked Arkansas shaded Houston 82-80.

In SAA Premier

Naccarato's Downs Kaye

SAUGERTIES — With just four games remaining in the second half competition of the SAA Premier Basketball League, Naccarato Insurance took a giant step towards clinching a pennant with a 121-91 triumph over first half champion Kaye Sports.

Naccarato's now has only to avoid an upset by one of the loop's also-rans to force a championship playoff with Kaye's for the league title as the Insurers are currently 5-0 with a two-game lead in the standings.

In another SAA battle, Boo's Tavern dumped Gokey Brothers Construction, 106-98. Naccarato's led all the way, but the spread was only ten points when Kaye's disintegrated with 12 minutes remaining. An injury and two ejections left the Sports with just four players at that point, and the Insurers took advantage of the situation to run the clock out of reach.

Jack Naccarato led the victory with 33 points including nine-of-nine from the foul line.

Rod Chaddo added 24 with ten assists, and Matt Zweig had 23 points. Rich Koegel paced Kaye's with 34 points and 29 rebounds.

Scott Wilson poured in 42 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to help Boo's draw even with Gokey Bros. at 1-4. Five other Tavernmen hit double figures while Ron Burris canned 32 for Gokey.

BOWLING

KINGSTON — There weren't any new additions to the Top Ten, but there was some solid bowling nevertheless in the latest meeting of the International League. Fourteen men cracked the 600 mark with Jack Ferraro setting the pace with 245-670.

Chris Leaves No Doubts

SEATTLE (UPI) — Chris Evert wasn't sure she was the world's best woman tennis player, so she went out and proved it all over again just for her own peace of mind.

"There's been a lot of pressure on me because Martina's won three tournaments and she beat me in the first one," said Evert. "There was a question in my mind who was the best."

Just to set the record straight, Evert's finely tuned serve-and-volley style of Martina Navratilova, 6-2, 6-4, Sunday and Chris was No. 1 again with a championship in the $100,000 Virginia Slims of Seattle.

"I think we were both very nervous and there was a lot of tension in the match because we both want to be No. 1 very badly," said Evert. "After a two-week layoff I really wanted to win."

"I think my attitude was a lot different. I've been keyed up this whole week. I was a little worried because ... I hadn't had a tough match this whole tournament. I really can't say I was pushed until the final match."

Evert's sharply angled strokes to the baseline corners kept Navratilova off balance and when the 20-year-old Czech expatriot tried to rush the net, Chris put the ball at her feet or stretched her with a winning lob.

"I was really nervous at the beginning of the match," said Navratilova, who had won three of the four previous Slims tournaments, including a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Evert a month ago. "Nervousness really ties your feet and you get sluggish and heavy. I was missing a lot of easy shots."

"Then I kind of shook it off in the second set and started playing better."

Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice All for Good Cause on West Coast

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It's a perfect setup for Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice, but the Smiths and Joneses are doing it.

Across the Golden Gate Bridge, in prosperous Marin County, ordinary persons are sharing showers, and sex is not the reason. Generally speaking, The reason is the California drought, and the start of strict water rationing to 169,000 Marin County residents. The water district's reservoirs are only one-fourth full in the second year of a drought, and may be mud puddles by fall without rain. The rationing has spurred necessary water-saving ideas by the citizenry, which now is limited to 47 gallons per person daily. Examples: — In the town of Fairfax, BYOW parties are in vogue. The initials stand for "Bring Your Own Water." And less ice is used in drinks.

— Stores are doing a brisk business in paper plates and cups for those who want to eliminate use of dishes and automatic dishwashers.

— Other merchants are being cleaned out of buckets, garbage cans and dish pans by residents who want to store drain water and catch any rain that might fall.

— Housewives are changing sheets and towels less often. "One cycle of my clothes washer takes 40 gallons — almost my entire day's supply," said a San Rafael homemaker.

In Mill Valley, housewife Donna Gilcrease is one of those who no longer takes a shower alone. The shower is now all in the family.

"It's kind of fun, more fun than saving dishwater in plastic bottles to keep the garden alive — which we also do, of course," she said.

In Tiburon, Marsha Reed invites neighborhood children to her home to share baths with her own three youngsters. "It works out great, and it's a fun way to save water," she said.

The telephones of well-diggers are ringing off the hook. One San Rafael man hired a well witch to look for a possible well in his back yard.

The witch, a 72-year-old man, found one, 26 feet down, with a diving rod, and now a neighbor across the street is asking him to look in his yard.

With strict financial penalties threatened for water over-users by the Marin Municipal Water District, residents have changed personal habits:

Some have turned off their dishwashers and fill the sink with water to be used all day. Others are using children's wading pools in the shower to collect the runoff water for other uses.

Low-flow shower outlets are being installed by the thousands, as are water bottles to cut toilet flush consumption — normally the biggest user. "Who do you get angry at?" said fashion model Lynn Carroll-Beren of San Anselmo. "You just have to do what you have to do."

PUBLIC NOTICE

STATE OF NEW YORK PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

ALBANY

CASE 27079—NEW YORK TELEPHONE COMPANY—Optional Single Message Unit Timing.

January 28, 1977

TAKE NOTICE that public statement hearings in the above captioned matter will be held in New York City, World Trade Center, Tower II, 44th floor, before Administrative Law Judges Vincent P. Furlong and Thomas R. Matias on Tuesday, March 1, 1977 and, also on the same date (March 1, 1977) in Buffalo at the Common Council Chambers, City Hall, before Administrative Law Judge William H. Arkin.

These public statement hearings will be on a common record with those public statement hearings being held in Case 27100—New York Telephone Company—Telephone Rates. The hearings being held in both New York and Buffalo will commence at 1:00 p.m. and continue until all interested persons present have been heard, but not later than 5:00 p.m., at which time the hearings will recess until 7:00 p.m. and continue subject to the availability of facilities.

At the Commission's direction, its staff and the New York Telephone Company have studied plans which would accommodate certain features regarding the timing of single message unit calls and peak period pricing. A number of plans were developed and submitted to the Commission which resulted in the issuance (on October 5, 1976) of an order initiating the subject proceeding. On January 3, 1977 the Commission issued a further order limiting the scope of the proceeding to nine possible plans identified by the company and the staff. None of these plans contemplate mandatory timing for residential customers although some contemplate that timing could be optional with such customers. Other plans raise the possibility of mandatory timing for business customers or optional timing for both residential and business. The plans advanced also contemplate the use of message unit pricing vs. penny-pricing, monthly differentials vs. no monthly differentials and the accommodation of either a two-tier or three-tier schedule.

A New Justice Concept

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government plans to test a new concept of justice, in which criminals are ordered to work to repay their victims instead of going to jail.

Richard W. Velde, administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, said Sunday this form of justice is a "much more positive approach to rehabilitation." The agency said $2 million in grants will help finance a two-year evaluation of the concept in seven states — California, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts and Oregon.

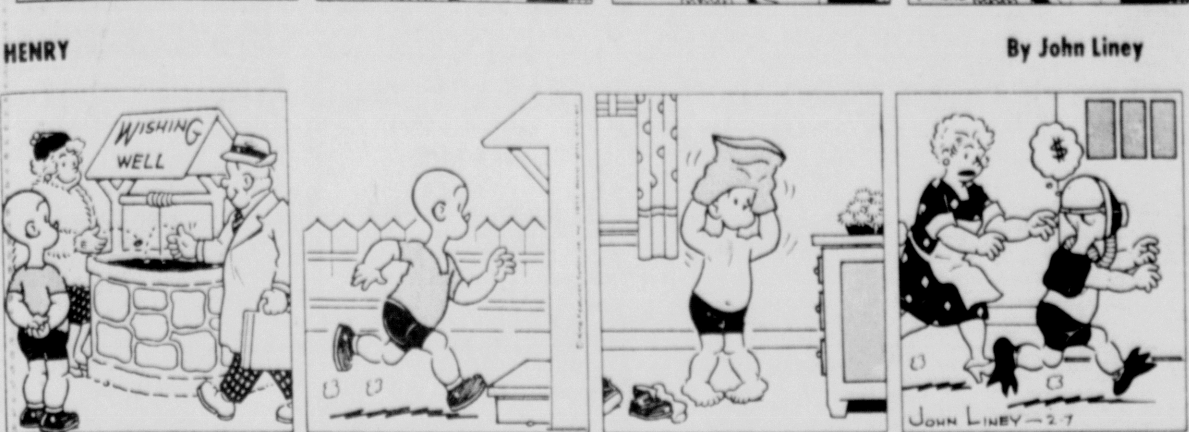

One question the agency hopes to answer is whether offenders should make restitution directly to the victim or to the community in the form of work in a hospital or other institution.

Other questions are whether this form of rehabilitation would be lasting, how to arrive at a fair restitution, and whether the victim should have a say about it.

The agency said the concept already has been tried in several areas with promising results.

It told of a burglar who was caught breaking into a minister's home. He was ordered to work for the minister. Three years later the minister performed a marriage ceremony for the ex-burglar and his bride.

In another case a youth stole and wrecked a car. Instead of going to jail he was ordered to work for the insurance company to repay it for the loss.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 8

Your birthday today: Self-assurance increases as intuitive guidance proves accurate, timely. With a little practice you're more self-reliant, shouldn't take jobs or make deals that put you under detailed supervision.

The year is a bonanza of recognition for the self-employed. If in your student years, be serious, master a technical specialty. Today's natives put everything on the line when a personal goal is involved. Those born this year will zealously preach new ideals.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Interest in your job shows. Observers react favorably at a future date when least expected. You can coax family members into any plan you have in mind.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Gripping about what did or didn't take place as hoped for wastes time. Much of it happens today, more hangs fire. Get busy, make things softer for yourself.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Being right isn't all the battle; be patient with people who think they're important, gentle with those who care for you, firm with anyone you instruct.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Settle domestic issues thoroughly so you're free to pursue business wholeheartedly. Use a rare opportunity to master new wrinkles, keep up with rivals.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: You must think for everybody else as well as for yourself. Stick to basics. Organize a presentation of work to bring to the attention of people in authority.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Go with existing trends, but avoid complex schemes. Accentuate the positive, profitable. Rearrange schedules to get a better hearing for pet projects.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Your route is circuitous; contact should be direct. Revision to get on the right track takes time, is worth it. Your main problem is persistent persuasion.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Nothing runs as rapidly as you'd like. Follow a last minute hunch. You come out ahead, in shape to take advantage of special treatment you attract.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Don't try to put a new system into effect without consent of people who must cope with it. Your drive stirs competition or efforts to slow your progress.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Associatesicker. Wait them out, you'll get your way eventually. Meanwhile, increase income using avocations as background. Romantic appeal runs high.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Because you like your friends doesn't mean they like each other. Keep them separate, avoid confusion. Wishful thinking distorts information; check it out.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Report anything short of perfection, and it's taken as a complaint. Those who realize what you're doing respect your intentions, intercede where it counts.

TEEN FORUM

By JEAN ADAMS, Ph.D.

PARENTS: (Q.) Why do my parents tell me not to do certain things and then turn around and do it themselves? I love them. But my dad left home. He had been acting like a 20-year-old, which he's not, and doing the dumb things he told us never to do!

I'm sometimes ashamed to admit he's my father, which makes me feel guilty. If my mom starts acting like him, I'm really in trouble.

Am I wrong to feel the way I do? I thought I wanted to be just like my parents. Lately, I don't know.

I hope any parents that read this will take a look at themselves. — Unhappy Teen-Ager in Connecticut.

(A.) We all should take a look at ourselves from time to time.

Parents are not perfect, no matter how much their children may wish they were. They do not always practice what they preach, because they, too, are only human. Human beings have failings and are inconsistent.

Your father wants you to know right from wrong. This is why he has tried to point you in the right direction, even if he is not able to follow his advice himself all the time.

Respect him for trying and for doing the best he can. Love him and encourage him to come back home, if you get the opportunity to do so.

MARRIED: (Q.) This may not sound serious to you, but it is to me. I like this married man very much (too much!). He doesn't know it, but I think he's great. I've liked him for two years.

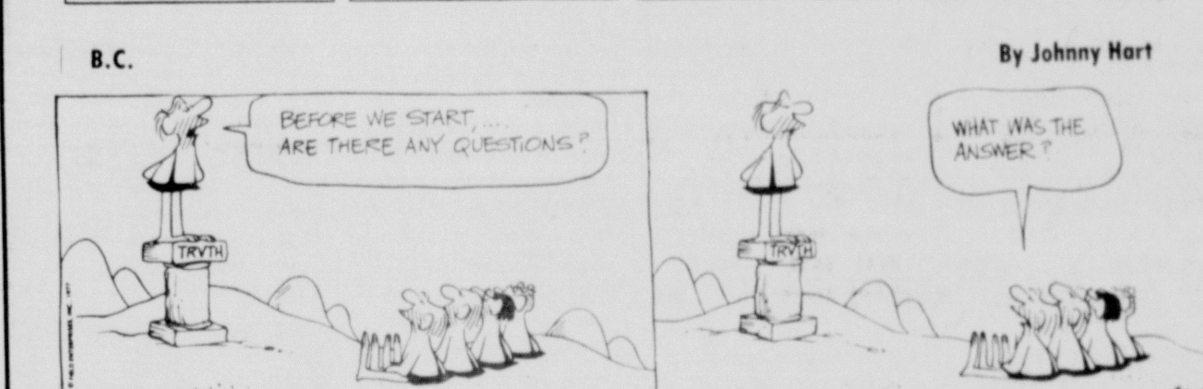

At first, I thought it was just a fantasy and I'd get over it, but I haven't. I hardly notice any of the boys at school. I am too busy thinking about him.

I don't want to hurt his wife, but I just can't get over it. I am 17. — Hooked in Pennsylvania.

(A.) What you are doing is very serious. You are not sharing sex with a married man, as some girls who write me do. But you are ruining your life with your obsession with this man.

You are isolating yourself. You are living in a barren world that gives you nothing now and promises you nothing in the future. Snap out of it and find yourself a boy friend.
